Figure2: The relationship between graph Modularity and the variance explained by the first eigenvalue. Points represent an individual subtree, constructed as described above. Modularity is calculated using the algorthithm infoMap; clustering at 0 occurs due to the algorithm being unwilling to assign membership below a certain modularity threshold. The rightmost panel is the same data, but with the 0−modularity values removed.